“I can't thank you enough for taking your time to join us for the last two Alliance Procurement fairs – Alliance Baltimore and Alliance Mid-Atlantic. Your presentation was one of the most energetic, if not THE most energetic presentation that the Alliance Conferences has ever seen! Milton, you so involved the audience that they were actually (happily) grabbing your microphone and introducing themselves and their professions. In Atlantic City, you captivated the group of 400+ by walking all around the huge room and engaging them with your wit, confidence, and knowledge of networking and company building. You need to be everywhere to motivate small businesses to go beyond the mundane and build their companies. Your truly know how to get a crowd enthused, especially after lunch!”

“My Department has been working through a period of change...The immediate challenge included motivating all managers to go beyond the requirements of their jobs and take the initiative at every opportunity. In short, management needed to be proactive rather than reactive. This challenge had to be emphatically stated and we needed a new way to motivate managers. This is precisely what Milton Hunt provided at our meeting.

Through Hunt’s personal energy, unique perspective, originality of approach, and ability to relate to all levels – viz. employees with a bewildering variety of backgrounds – he did just that. He used humor, personal experience, and an uncanny ability to understand personal common denominators to reach his audience and to deliver the message.

His presentation was received enthusiastically, and I noted an immediate, positive reaction from my staff and their subordinates. Indolence was replaced with enthusiasm, cynicism with optimism. I could not have been more pleased with the presentation.”

In your company,

- ...is inadequate work of an employee dragging down staff productivity and morale?
- ...is an employee's resistance to change reflected in poor job performance?
- ...is an employee unwilling to be a team player?
- ...have recent actions of an employee harmed customer relationships?
- ...are you conflicted about whether or not to release an employee?

If "yes" is your answer to any of these questions, your company is losing money.

Financial losses due to issues and problems with employees can deeply damage your company's bottom line. A company can lose thousands of dollars because of the ineptness of just one employee. The good news is, there are ways to overcome the challenges.

Employee Coaching is a professional service providing clients with feedback, insights, and guidance from an outside vantage point. This is a process of one-on-one sessions designed to help clients face obstacles and/or fears that may be hindering them in pursuing their personal or professional goals. Sessions are customized to meet both the requirements of the respective company and the individual needs of the employee. There's no 'one-size-fits-all.'

Change hinges on performance, attitude, and behavior modification, not on altering a person's personality. Utilizing a systematic approach and through positive interactions, clients unleash their true potential.

At the outset of the Employee Coaching relationship, goals are clearly defined — both the client's goals and the employer's goals. Progress is continually measured. And there is a definitive end.

A vital part of the coaching relationship is the debriefing meeting held with designated company officers after each coaching session. The debriefing is a forum for information exchange and management to be updated on the employee's progress.

For the employee, the employee coach provides a trusting environment. He can identify and leverage existing strengths, and access weaknesses in need of development.

For the employer, the employee coach puts resolutions into an action plan that delivers proven results. "Human capital" is your company's most valuable asset. When employees fall short of expectations, Employee Coaching is the way to invest in them — and your bottom line.

Testimonials - Employee Coaching

“Mr. Hunt conducted developmental training for our Human Resources team. He took the time to familiarize himself with the organization and individual staff members. This additional step allowed him to tailor a training package that met the Department's unique needs. His presentation was engaging, energetic, and full of useful tools that the staff could begin using immediately.

In addition to group training, Mr. Hunt provided small group and individualized coaching/consulting on leadership. He spent time with staff and made a conscious effort to get to know them so he could understand their individual needs. This allowed him to provide targeted feedback and specific instructions and advice on their specific situation.

It has been a pleasure working with Mr. Hunt throughout the project. His passion and enthusiasm are contagious. And his collaborative spirit enabled us to work together seamlessly in addressing the Human Resources Team's training needs.”
